I am the Principal Investigator of the PACT Lab. The PACT (Politics, Activism, Culture, And Threat) Lab investigates through cultural political psychological methods the meaning-making processes of threat and how it leads to both activism and the restriction of rights and its impact on policy. My most recent book, Psychology in Policy: Redefining Politics Through the Individual, examines how political psychological research has fails to account for the individual and proposes a new framework for cultural political psychology.

Drawing on my experience as a policy advisor in Congress, the PACT Lab investigates policy-relevant issues, such as company's use of performative vs. substantive activism in attracting customers, collaborations with colleagues in Business schools on signaling trust to consumers, a systematic review on the dehumanizing state of psychological research of life in prison; a mixed-methods study analyzing the meaning-making process of seeing a memorial honoring both the Union and the Confederacy on one's campus, experimental manipulations of disproving one's meta-perceptions and using machine learning to read qualitative messages between partners to predict conditions; and how one's perceived threat impacts the restrictions of rights on the border of citizenship.

Personal Teaching Enhancement

Fall 2022 Faculty Colloquium Series in Data Science: Data Visualization

Gave a 60-minute interactive talk to teach faculty how to visualize data using rStudio. Faculty learned basic ggplot2 commands and were able by the end of an hour to replicate data from a published paper.

Spring 2018 Certificate in the Apprenticeship in Teaching Program

Completed the Apprenticeship in Teaching Program at the Center for New Design and Learning and Scholarship (CNDLS) at Georgetown, attending professional development workshops about the effectiveness of flipped classrooms and peer to peer collaboration. The following workshops were attended to complete this certificate:

- Assessment and Grading
- Effective Classroom Interaction
- Scholarship in Teaching and Learning
- Syllabus Design
- TA Core Principles
- Teaching Observation
- Teaching Portfolio
- Course Design
- Difficult Dialogues
- Using Canvas Effectively
- Teaching STEM Labs and Recitations
- Principles and Practices of Inclusive Pedagogy
- Dynamic Lectures
